Port Lincoln for Health and Pleasure

The needs of mankind are simple: Health, Wealth, and Happiness, that is all. The first of these is more or less a matter of Nature; the second an ordinance of Providence; while the third is a happy combination of the first and second.

There is in South Australia, 170 miles west of Adelaide, an almost land-locked expanse of water, comprising three beautiful bays. In the year 1802 Captain Matthew Flinders on his good ship, the "Investigator," sailed into one of these sheltered havens. Being but human, there is no doubt that the artistic sense of this gallant sailor's soul was awakened. Before his eyes mountains, timbered with pine and fir trees, rolled down in stately grandeur to greet a softly crooning sea in a lasting embrace of fellowship and good will. No doubt thoughts of the future of this masterpiece of Nature coursed through his sailor mind as, standing on the poop of his ship, he surveyed the wonder and beauty of the scene.

Sailors, so it is said, have dreams. Sometimes their dreams come true, and maybe Captain Flinders dreamed of the time in the distant future, which is the to-day of the present generation, when Port Lincoln would take its place among the beauty and health-giving places of the world, and play its part in Industry and Commerce. The words of Shelley might have run through his mind as he beheld Port Lincoln for the first time: "A THING OF BEAUTY IS A JOY FOR EVER." This poetic phrase can be appositely applied to Port Lincoln, whose charming scenery is not only an everlasting joy, but an economic asset of great value as well to the present generation of South Australians and to those generations yet to come.

Port Lincoln the beautiful! In the life-giving, healthy air of mountain and sea; in the artistic grandeur of the harbor, wherein can be berthed the British Fleet, and into which sail the leviathan freighters, bringing to and taking from these shores the merchandise in exchange for the wealth produced by those fertile lands beyond the hills standing sentinel over the blue, sparkling waters of Boston Bay. Can anyone deny that under such conditions as these, which obtain here in Port Lincoln, those simple needs of the human family are wanting?

Here in Port Lincoln land and sea have co-operated, offering health and economic wealth—a combination which must bring happiness to those who seek it; and those who seek will surely find it in Port Lincoln.

Port Lincoln

Endowed by Providence and Nature with beauty and utility, is it any wonder that this seaport has made rapid progress during the last quarter of a century? Is it to be wondered that each successive Government during the last quarter of a century has, despite political differences, been in agreement over the question of the economic possibilities of Port Lincoln and the country of which it is the growing hub?

The population of this embryonic commercial port is a little over 4,000. The growth of the population from 1,500 in 1920 to its present numbers is indicative of the progress of Eyre Peninsula—a future State of the Commonwealth.

To-day Industry flourishes, while social expansion is apparent and production and local manufactures are the order of the times.

A place devoid of historical significance is uninteresting and usually rusts in an unprogressive rut. Through history we mark the rise and fall of empires and nations, the growth or extinction of cities, villages, and communities. When the history of Port Lincoln comes to be written—and there is at the present time sufficient to fill a volume or two—those who shall be privileged to do the work will be astounded not only at the rapid growth of this beautifully and utility endowed child of Nature, but with the accident which discovered for man's use and benefit this gift of God, so beautiful, so health-giving, and so wealth-producing.

Statisticians can give figures which, summarised, speak for themselves. Some idea of the size and importance of Port Lincoln and Eyre's Peninsula may be gauged from the 1927 statistics:—Wheat production, 6,967,366 bushels; wool, 6,861,810 lbs.; cargo tonnage handled, 399,629 tons; railway tonnage, 211,785; 478 miles of railway connect Port Lincoln and Thevenard with outlying districts. The area under cultivation 1930-31 season exceeds 1,100,000 acres; Tod River Reservoir capacity, 2,400,000,000 gallons; 768 miles of trunk and reticulation mains serve Port Lincoln and Eyre's Peninsula; Port Lincoln has five banks; continuous telephone service connected by trunk line with Adelaide; most of the leading city firms have representatives, depots, or showrooms; numerous motor garages, hotels, large drapery and grocery stores, and boardinghouses; talking picture shows, electric light and freezing works, two newspapers, convent, primary and secondary schools, joinery, fibrous plaster, furniture and fertiliser works, etc., etc.

Port Lincoln is in your own State. It is the hub of a rapidly growing agricultural area, and promises at no distant date to be one of the central seaports of the Southern Hemisphere.

A twelve-hour run in a comfortable and up-to-date steamer brings you to Port Lincoln. There mountains and sea offer complete relaxation in rejuvenating change of air amidst scenery unexcelled for beauty and charm.

Port Lincoln offers the nerve-racked city dweller a restorative which his specialist cannot prescribe in drugs: Peaceful surroundings, soothing and artistic scenery, the rejuvenating air of mountain and sea; while so far has Port Lincoln progressed that for excellence in accommodation and service the HOTEL BOSTON ranks among the best in the Commonwealth.

The proprietor of HOTEL BOSTON cordially invites you to come to Port Lincoln for that next holiday. You who feel the need for something better will find at HOTEL BOSTON, Port Lincoln, an atmosphere offering something distinctive from the usual run of holiday, which, perhaps, for you in the past has lacked in just that one essential to make your change complete—"Something Better."

Come to HOTEL BOSTON, Port Lincoln, for your next vacation.

Yours for Health and Pleasure,

Maurice G. Henderson

A Corner of the Dining Hall, Hotel Boston.

TO "Mine Host" there is something besides the Menu wanting for the complete satisfaction of his guests: It is a Service which embodies just that personal touch, making the guest feel at home.

Hotel Boston Service goes without saying. Its Service is the essence of real Service. And yet it is unobtrusive in its efficiency, creating just that atmosphere of complete satisfaction which reminds the guest that he is receiving just that little extra attention which counts so much.

The light, airy, and artistically appointed Dining Hall of the Hotel Boston looks out on a panorama of scenic charm — mountains rolling down to meet a blue, tranquil sea — and in such an environment one is at once filled with the luxurious feeling of dining well.

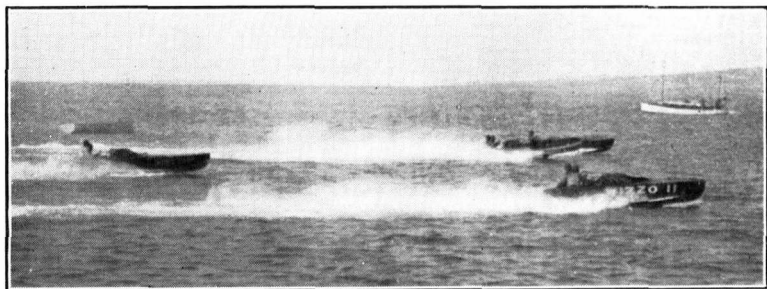

Under the direction of a skilled Chef, Hotel Boston's Cuisine tempts and satisfies even the most fastidious of appetites.
